Paradigm Shift to Quality Urbanization

After years of rapid urbanization that emphasized construction and economic growth, China is entering a new era of urban development with a policy attention on the quality of urbanization. This paradigm shift is timely, but also challenging. The past model has led to serious environmental degradation, distortions in land and housing markets, and worsening wealth inequalities, which must be addressed through the new effort for quality urbanization. Climate change, aging, and emerging technologies also pose new challenges and opportunities. China can learn significantly from global experiences in new urbanism, and its pursuit for quality urbanization will also be crucial for the successful implementation of the New Urban Agenda, which was adopted by national governments at the United Nations Conference on Housing and Sustainable Urban Development (Habitat III).

This conference continues the series of International Conferences on China Urban Development, previously held in Cardiff, Hong Kong, Shanghai, London, and Glasgow. It will bring together researchers from urban studies, geography, sociology, economics, political science, urban planning, urban management and public policy as well as China studies, and from different parts of the world, to share empirical and policy research findings on urbanization and urbanism. It will provide a platform to explore the complex process of urban development in China, and to debate policy and actions towards quality urbanization in an increasingly uncertain world.

Previous International Conferences on China Urban Development

Anthony Yeh: From Mega-Cities to Mega-City Regions in China in a New Wave of Urbanization and Economic Transition: Issues and Challenges

Abstract: Mega-city region development has been a new trend of urbanization in China since economic reform in the late 1970s. Different waves of economic transition, i.e., rural industrialization, land-centered development and urban tertiarization, have connected cities to be developed into mega city-regions and later into polycentric super mega city-regions. Mega-city regions are becoming more and more important in China's urbanization and economic development. Challenges confronting the future development of China's mega city-regions include jurisdictional fragmentation and inter-city competition, socio-spatial inequality and environmental externalities. Such challenges urge for effective governance to coordinate local agencies within different jurisdictions, reforms and novel policies targeted to urbanization, economic growth and land development, and new planning strategies in the new era of high tech industrial and producer services development and rising per capita income.

Prof. Anthony G.O. Yeh, FHKIP, FRTPI, FPIA, FCILT, FRICS, is Chan To-Hann Professor in Urban Planning and Design and Chair Professor in GIS and Urban Planning of the Department of Urban Planning and Design and Director of GIS Research Centre, and former Dean of Graduate School, Director of Centre of Urban Studies and Urban Planning, Institute of Transport Studies, and Head of Department of Urban Planning and Design at the University of Hong Kong. He is an Academician of the Chinese Academy of Sciences and Academy of Social Sciences in the UK and a Fellow of TWAS (The Academy of Sciences for the Developing World). His main areas of specialisation are in urban development and planning in Hong Kong, China, and South East Asia; the applications of geographic information systems (GIS) as planning support system; and smart mobility and smart cities. He has published over 40 books and monographs, 80 book chapters, and 140 journal papers with an H-index of 54 and a total number of 13,306 citations (Google Scholar). He received the UN-HABITAT Lecture Award in 2008, Dr. Gill-Chin Lim Global Award in 2012, HKU's Distinguished Research Achievement Award in 2016, gold medal in the Geneva International Exhibition of Inventions in 2018.

Weiping Wu: Studying China's Urban Development: Bridging Disciplinary Knowledge and Area Specialization

Abstract: Theorizing China's urbanization and urban changes has been both exciting and challenging because of the rapid speed and explosive scale at which events and policies take place. It also makes us wonder: To what do we compare China? Is China like any other country? While the Chinese city is undergoing economic, social, and spatial transformation resembling what we have seen elsewhere, parts of its trajectory clearly push the limits of contemporary urban theories and experience. Given the unique qualities of China's urban development and the country's rising global influence, it behooves us to think about bridging disciplinary knowledge and area specialization. This presentation hopes to engage colleagues and scholars on two fronts: first, to place China in the global context and consider what is taking place outside of the country when researching in and about China; second, to begin creating new theories about cities and their development based on China's experience and propel them towards the core of disciplinary knowledge. Through illustrations of boundary-crossing urban issues, the presentation also explores potential opportunities for new theory-building.

Weiping Wu is Professor of Urban Planning at Columbia University Graduate School of Architecture, Planning and Preservation (GSAPP) and Director of the M.S. Urban Planning program. She also is on the faculty of the Weatherhead East Asian Institute and Columbia Population Research Center. Before joining Columbia in 2016, she was Professor and Chair in the Department of Urban and Environmental Policy and Planning at Tufts University. Trained in architecture and urban planning, Prof. Wu has focused her research and teaching on understanding urban dynamics in developing countries in general and China in particular. She is an internationally acclaimed urban and planning scholar working on global urbanization with a specific expertise in issues of migration, housing, and infrastructure of Chinese cities. Her publications include eight books, as well as many articles in top international journals. Professor Wu is the President of the Association of Collegiate Schools of Planning (ACSP), a consortium of university-based programs offering credentials in urban and regional planning, with more than 100 full-member schools in North America.

Geoffrey Hewings: Integrating the Internal and External Structure of Metropolitan Economies: Some Initial Explorations

Abstract: While there has been a great deal of attention directed to the structure and structural changes in world trade, there is a growing interest in exploring the integration of international and interregional trade. The paper focuses on the Beijing-Tianjin-Hebei mega-metropolitan region (hereafter JingJinJi) through the development of a four-region model (Beijing, Tianjin, Hebei and Rest of China). The initial explorations explore the internal structure of the multi-region economies to understanding the nature and strength of internal interdependence, using measure of feedback effects, field of influence and hypothetical extraction and average propagation lengths. The second part of the paper examines the role of foreign demand on the four regions and the nature and strength of the direct and indirect (interregional) dependencies. The final section of the paper returns to the internal structure of JingJinJi by examining the nature and strength on interregional income formation employing the Miyazawa framework.

Dr Geoffrey J.D. Hewings is Director Emeritus of the Regional Economics Applications Laboratory at the University of Illinois at Urbana-Champaign as well as an Emeritus Professor in the Departments of Economics, Agricultural and Consumer Economics, Urban and Regional Planning, Geography and in the Institute of Government and Public Affairs. His undergraduate degree is from University of Birmingham, England and masters and doctorate from the University of Washington, Seattle. Prior to joining the University of Illinois, he served on the faculties of the University of Kent (UK) and the University of Toronto. He has served as a visiting professor at universities in Australia, Israel, Indonesia, Japan, Korea, Spain and China. He received a doctorate, honoris causa, from the University of Bourgogne, France in 2002 and one from the University of Extremadura, Spain in 2016. Professor Hewings main research areas are in the fields of urban and regional analysis, with a strong emphasis on the development and application of large-scale models. His research activities are centered in the Regional Economics Applications Laboratory (REAL), a unit he co-founded in 1989. His publications include 15 books, 82 book chapters and over 200 articles in major professional journals; he has supervised over 60 doctoral dissertations (more detail available at www.real.illinois.edu).

Cindy Fan: Migrants in Asian Cities: Householding Experiences and Trajectories

Abstract: Given the central role of households in motivating and implementing migration, this paper argues that the household or “householding” approach is fundamental and essential for migration theories, by drawing from examples in China and Asia. Household-splitting that enables the earning of remittances sets in motion processes of gender and intergenerational divisions of labor that involve both the migrants and the left-behind, constrained by and challenging traditional social roles and norms. Circularity and translocality facilitate migrants' straddling the origin and destination locations and their potential return. In China, hundreds of millions of rural migrants circulate between their home villages and host cities. Large numbers of women from South and Southeast Asia are employed in Hong Kong, Taiwan, and Singapore, facilitated by organized recruitment that restricts their rights and settlement possibilities, and motivated by remittances as a major source of the household income. Likewise, transnational migrants who take on multiple identities and ties infuse new meanings to the "home" and to "being family." These examples underscore the importance of considering the household rather than the migrant as the basic organizing unit for migration theories, management and policy-making.

Cindy Fan is UCLA's Vice Provost for International Studies and Global Engagement and is the first woman and Asian to hold the position of senior international officer. She is also Professor of Geography, and is formerly Chair of the Asian American Studies Department and Associate Dean of Social Sciences at UCLA. Dr. Fan received her BA from the University of Hong Kong, her MPhil from the Chinese University of Hong Kong, and her PhD from the Ohio State University. Internationally known for her research on migration, regional development and gender in China, Dr. Fan has numerous publications, including the book China on the Move, a pioneering study on rural-urban migration in China. A regular commentator for the New York Times, Dr. Fan is also frequently interviewed by the media, including the BBC, China Radio International, and National Public Radio. She has delivered numerous keynotes in Europe, Asia, Australia, Africa and the U.S. Dr. Fan is a recipient of the UCLA Distinguished Teaching Award, a Distinguished Scholar Award from the Asian Geography Specialty Group of the AAG, an American Council on Education Fellowship, and major grants from the Henry Luce Foundation, Andrew Mellon Foundation and National Science Foundation.

George McCarthy: Planning and Financing the New Urban Agenda
(Keynote speech at conference banquet)

Abstract: UN Habitat III established a policy framework—the New Urban Agenda—to guide urbanization for the next 20 years. Similarly, China aspires for quality urbanization. How shall we plan and finance New Urban Agenda and quality urbanization? China's past experience shows that urban growth by spatial expansion can work, if harnessing land value increases to pay for it. The new challenge is to find ways to grow by redevelopment and find ways to pay for it. Much can be learned from international experiences.

Dr. George "Mac" McCarthy is President and CEO of the Lincoln Institute of Land Policy in Cambridge, Massachusetts. The Lincoln Institute seeks to improve quality of life through the effective use, taxation, and stewardship of land. A nonprofit private operating foundation whose origins date to 1946, the Lincoln Institute researches and recommends creative approaches to land as a solution to economic, social, and environmental challenges. Before joining the Lincoln Institute in 2014, Mac directed Metropolitan Opportunity at the Ford Foundation which sought to provide disadvantaged people better access to good jobs and other opportunities for advancement by supporting regional planning, and coordinated transportation and housing development to alleviate poverty and reduce its concentration in metropolitan areas in the U.S. and developing countries in Asia, Africa, and Latin America. Before taking that position, Mac administered a program at Ford that focused on using homeownership to build assets for low-income families and their communities. Before joining Ford, Mac worked as a Senior Research Associate at the Center for Urban and Regional Studies at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill. Mac has worked as Professor of Economics at Bard College, Resident Scholar at the Jerome Levy Economics Institute, Visiting Scholar and Member of the High Table at King's College of Cambridge University, Visiting Scholar at the University of Naples, Italy, and Research Associate at the Centre for Social Research in St. Petersburg, Russia. Mac received a B.A. in Economics and Mathematics at the University of Montana; an M.A. in Economics at Duke University; and, a Ph.D. in Economics at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill.

You-Tien Hsing: Spatializing the State and Society

Abstract: One of the jobs for urban studies researchers is to activate the role of space in the analysis of social change. In this talk I reflect on the analytical tools that help to activate space in my research on the state-society relationship in rural and urban China. These tools include spatializing research questions and the analytical framework; spatializing power relations in question; and spatializing the temporal dynamics in the state-society relations. If “doing theory” is about theorizing, spatializing the analysis could be a step towards theorizing the space.

You-Tien Hsing is Professor and Pamela P. Fong Family Distinguished Chair in China Studies, University of California, Berkeley. Her research and teaching has been focused on the political economy of development in East Asia, especially China. Her first book, Making Capitalism in China: The Taiwan Connection, focuses on the role of culture in inter-regional capital flows. In her second book, The Great Urban Transformation: Politics of Land and Property in China, she examined the issue of territoriality, and how the transformation of the state and the society shapes and is shaped by land battles in Chinese cities and villages. Prof. Hsing's current project concerns the cultural and environmental politics in Northwestern China.

Cecilia Wong: Sustainable Urbanization and Community Well-being in Suburban Neighborhoods in Beijing, China

Abstract: Rapid outward expansion of urban land in many of China's cities has resulted in the production of spatially diverse suburban areas, including newly developed residential complexes and the incorporation of existing neighbourhoods into the urban fabric. The concept of 'community well-being' provides a useful framework to examine the relationship between the well-being of individuals and the physical environment and spatial conditions in which they live. While the study of subjective well-being and its determinants has been rapidly established in China, most research tends to be at the city and provincial level. By adopting a spatial planning perspective, this paper aims to make an original contribution by examining community well-being in Beijing's suburban neighbourhoods, which formed via the rapid suburbanisation process underway since the 1990s. The underlying dynamics and spatial variations of community well-being are assessed by subjective and objective measures and taking both personal attributes and neighbourhood environmental factors into account to draw out policy implications for sustainable urban development.

Cecilia Wong is Professor of Spatial Planning, Fellow of the UK Academy of Social Sciences and Fellow of the Royal Town Planning Institute. She is currently the Director of Spatial Policy and Analysis Lab of the Manchester Urban Institute. She has research expertise in strategic spatial planning, policy monitoring and analysis, urban and regional development, and housing and infrastructure planning. She is a commissioner of the UK 2070 Commission on Regional Inequalities and was a commissioner of the Labour Party's Lyons Independent Housing Review; a member of Department for Communities and Local Government's expert panel on housing and planning; an expert panel member of the European Commission's Urban Audit II; and an expert group member of the UN-Habitat City Prosperity Index. She has recently completed a three year project funded by the Economic and Social Research Council under the Newton Fund on examining China's urbanisation approaches and their impact on the suburban neighbourhoods.

Fulong Wu: Adding New Narratives to Urban Imagination: An Introduction to New Directions of Urban Studies in China

Abstract: Rapid urban development in China provides rich cases for urban research. Current urban studies in China are heavily influenced by an urban imagination embedded in the West. Using the cases of land management and environmental governance, social transformation, spatial and regional dimensions of urbanisation, this paper tries to rethink some surprising findings from empirical research in Chinese cities and contribute to theoretical understandings of urbanisation beyond contextual particularities. Following the narrative of 'planning centrality, market instruments' in China, this paper highlights the political logic behind managing growth and environmental governance, social differentiation produced by interwoven state and market forces, and new geographies of Chinese cities beyond economic-centred imagination.

Fulong Wu is Bartlett Professor of Planning at University College London. His research interests include urban development in China and its social and sustainable challenges. He has recently published a book, Planning for Growth: Urban and Regional Planning in China (2015, Routledge). He is an Editor of International Journal of Urban and Regional Research. He was awarded 2013 Outstanding International Impact Prize by UK ESRC. He has previously taught at Cardiff University and the University of Southampton.

Adrian Favell: From Creative City to Post-Growth: The Future Trajectory of Chinese Cities in East Asian Comparison

Abstract: As China has grown with spectacular examples of urban development, Japan has long been stuck in a relatively stagnant phase of economic development since its extraordinary “bubble” years of the 1980s. While once (in the 1950s and 60s) it was a paradigm of East Asian urbanism, its development and population dynamics are now more a guide to what may happen to East Asian urbanism in a more decadent, “post-growth” phase. My presentation will pose the question of what may be learned in China from the urban and regional development trajectory of Japan, particularly through the lens of how economically driven trends in “creative city” policy in Japan have evolved into distinctive, socially-engaged and welfare-oriented forms of architectural and arts practice.

Adrian Favell is Chair in Sociology and Social Theory at the University of Leeds. He is the author of various works on multiculturalism, migration, cosmopolitanism and cities, including Philosophies of Integration: Immigration and the Idea of Citizenship in France and Britain (1998), The Human Face of Global Mobility: International Highly Skilled Migration in Europe, North America and the Asia-Pacific (with Michael Peter Smith, 2006), and Eurostars and Eurocities: Free Movement and Mobility in an Integrating Europe (2008). A collection of his essays, Immigration, Integration and Mobility: New Agendas in Migration Studies, including more recent work on East-West migration and anti-EU politics in Britain, was published by ECPR Press (Jan 2015). He also writes about urban development and politics in Turkey, and Japan as a model of the “post-growth” society, particular in terms of its contemporary art and architecture. ## Chairs and Discussants

Rachelle Alterman is Emeritus Professor of Urban Planning and Law at Technion—Israel Institute of Technology, and currently Senior Research Fellow at the Neaman Institute for National Policy Research where she heads the Laboratory on Comparative Planning Law. She was recently appointed as the academic head of a new B.A. degree in Real Estate at Bar Ilan University. Prof. Alterman is the Founding President of the International Academic Association on Planning, Law and Property Rights and an Honorary Member of the Association of European Schools of Planning (the only non-European). She was selected as among 16 global “leaders in planning thought” whose contributions are reported in the book “Encounters in Planning Thought” (Routledge 2017). Her advice is frequently sought by UN Habitat, the OECD, the World Bank, and many bodies in Israel. Her over 200 publications are frequently cited not only by academics but also by courts and the media.

Armando Carbonell has led the urban planning program at the Lincoln Institute of Land Policy since 1999. After attending Clark University and the Johns Hopkins University, Carbonell spent the early part of his career as an academic geographer. He went on to initiate a new planning system for Cape Cod, Massachusetts, as the founding Executive Director of the Cape Cod Commission. In 1992 he was awarded a Loeb fellowship in the Graduate School of Design at Harvard University. Carbonell later taught urban planning at Harvard and the University of Pennsylvania and served as an editor of the British journal Town Planning Review. He has consulted on master plans in Houston, Texas, and Fujian Province, China, and is the author or editor of numerous works on city and regional planning and planning for climate change, including the recent Lincoln Institute book, Nature and Cities: The Ecological Imperative in Urban Design and Planning. Carbonell is a Fellow of the American Institute of Certified Planners, Fellow of the Academy of Social Sciences (UK), and Lifetime Honorary Member of the Royal Town Planning Institute (UK).

Rebecca L. H. Chiu is Head and Professor of Department of Urban Planning and Design, Director of Centre of Urban Studies and Urban Planning, and Belt and Road Urban Observatory, of the Faculty of Architecture, The University of Hong Kong. Her current major research interests are housing and urban sustainability, comparative Asian housing policies; China's urbanization, and ageing communities. She is Founder Chairman of the Asia Pacific Network for Housing Research.

Gonghao Cui is Emeritus Professor of Economic Geography, Nanjing University. He is a leading scholar in urban geography, city planning, and regional planning in China. In his long, distinguished academic career, he served as a standing member of the governing board of China Urban Science Research Society, vice chair of Urban Geography Committee, the Geographical Society of China, and member of the Advisory Committee for the Ministry of Housing and Urban & Rural Development. As a certified planner, he led the city and regional planning works for a number of local governments. He published a number of books and papers on a wide range of topics including urban demography, urban master planning, urban geography, and regional analysis and planning. In 2016, the China City Planning Society awarded Prof. Cui a life-time achievement award, the highest honor in China's city planning profession.

Michael Dunford is a Visiting Professor, Institute of Geographical Sciences and Natural Resources Research, Chinese Academy of Sciences and Emeritus Professor, School of Global Studies, University of Sussex). He holds degrees in Geography and Quantitative Economics from the University of Bristol, UK. In 2000 he was elected to the Academy of Social Sciences (AcSS); Honorary Member of the Società Geografica Italiana; in 2003 he received the Royal Geographical Society Award for Geographical Research in Europe; in 2015 he was elected a Fellow of the Regional Studies Association. In 1996-2002 he was Honorary Editor of Regional Studies. At present he is a Managing Editor of Area Development and Policy which within two and a half years has been accepted into ESCI and Scopus. He has acted as an advisor to the European Union, participated in a joint European Union-National Development and Reform Commission project on comparative regional development in China and Europe and was a participant in three joint projects involving German International Cooperation (GTZ/GIZ) and the State Council Leading Group on Poverty Alleviation and Development. An expert in economic and urban and regional geography, current research deals with growth, inequality, comparative development and governance at a global scale, in Eurasia and more specifically in China and the European Union. Current research focuses on the rise of China and the Chinese social model and is funded by the National Natural Science Foundation of China, China's Belt and Road Initiative and poverty alleviation.

Chaolin Gu is Professor at School of Architecture, Tsinghua University, and Vice President of the Chinese Futurology Association, Councilman of China Society for Urban Sciences. In addition, he is the member of Science and Technology Committee, Ministry of Housing and Construction. Prof. Gu has been visiting scholar in Department of Geography/Planning, University of Toronto in the academic year 1992-93 and in the Center of Urban Planning & Environmental Management, Hong Kong University in 1994 and 1995. He has also been a Visiting Professor at Institute of Social and Economic Geography, Katholie University of Leuven, Belgium. He is mainly engaged in research work in urban and regional planning, regional economics, urban geography in China. Since 1986, he has published 26 monographs and more than 380 papers. Professor Gu is a leading urban researcher in China and a well-known author on urbanisation and urban planning. He has successfully lead many major research and planning projects and won several prestigious prizes.

Canfei He is Cheung Kong Professor and Dean of College of Urban and Environmental Sciences at Peking University, and Deputy Director of the Peking University–Lincoln Institute Center for Urban Development and Land Policy. Professor He earned his Ph.D. degree in geography from Arizona State University in 2001. Dr. He is the vice presidents of China Geographical Society, China Regional Science Association and China Economic Geography Association. Dr. He is the associate editor of three Chinese journals including World Regional Geography, Geographical Research and Tropical Geography and is on the editorial board of several international journals, including Applied Geography, Geographical Journal, Eurasian Geography and Economics, Growth and Change, Area Development and Policy and Asian Geographers. Dr. He's research interests include industrial geography, urban and regional development, Environmental Economic Geography in China. Dr. He has authored or co-authored 14 books in Chinese and 2 books in English (Evolutionary Economic Geography in China and Geographical Dynamics and Firm Spatial Strategy in China) and published widely in international journals. He is also the lead guest editor of several special issues for Growth and Change (2016), Geojournal (2016), and Small Business Economics (2019). He was granted the Outstanding Young Scientist Award by National Natural Science Foundation of China in 2014 and was entitled the Cheung Kong professorship in 2016 by the Ministry of Education in China. He was listed by Elsevier as one of the most cited researchers in mainland China (social sciences), for five consecutive years (2015-2019).

Shenjing He is a Professor at the Department of Urban Planning and Design, The University of Hong Kong. Her primary research interests focus on urban redevelopment/gentrification, low-income housing, and health geography. Shenjing has published more than one hundred journal articles and book chapters in English and Chinese. She is the co-author/co-editor of Urban Poverty in China (2010), Locating Right to the City in the Global South (2013), Urban living: Mobility, Sociability, and Wellbeing (2016), Changing China: Migration, Communities and Governance in Cities (2016, 2018), and The Speculative City (forthcoming). Shenjing was listed by Elsevier as one of the most cited researchers in mainland China (social sciences), for five consecutive years (2015-2019), and top 1% HKU scholar (2017-2018). Shenjing serves as an editor for Urban Studies since 2012 and associate editor for Journal of Rural Studies since 2019. She sits on the editorial advisory board of Journal of Urban Affairs, Geography Compass, International Planning Studies, Area Development and Policy and Asian Geographer.

Xuwei Hu is emeritus professor of the Institute of Geography, China Academy of Sciences. He is a leading scholar in the areas of economic geography, regional development, regional planning, and urban region studies. He served as a planning adviser to the Ministry of Construction, vice president of China City Planning Association, and vice president of China Regional Sciences Association. He published numerous research papers and led a number of important regional planning works in China. His research and planning works won many awards including most significantly the Outstanding Achievement Award from the China City Planning Association in 2006, and the Scientific Achievement Award from the China Geographic Society in 2009.

Zhaoliang Hu is Emeritus Professor of Economic Geography, Peking University. He graduated from Tsinghua University in 1952, and taught at Renmin University of China and Peking University. He was a division director in the Ministry of Metallurgical Industry during 1972-1982, and chairman of Department of Geography, Peking University, during 1982-1992. He is a leading scholar in economic geography, industrial location, regional development, and cultural geography. He was formerly chairman of China Economic Geography Association.

George C. S. Lin is Chair Professor of Geography at the University of Hong Kong. He is the author of Red Capitalism in South China: Growth and Development of the Pearl River Delta (UBC Press, Vancouver, Canada, 1997), Developing China: Land, Politics, and Social Conditions (Routledge, London, 2009), co-author of China's Urban Space: Development under Market Socialism (Routledge, London, 2007), and many articles. His research interests include China's urban development and urbanization, land use and land management, the growth and spatiality of urbanism, and lately the processes and consequences of urban redevelopment in Chinese cities. Professor Lin has served as Chair of the China Geography Specialty Group of the Association of American Geographers (2007-08), Vice-Chair of the Economic Geography Commission (2006-2012) and Councilor (2014-2018) of the Geographical Society of China, Head of the Department of Geography (2006-08), and Associate Dean (Research) of HKU Faculty of Social Sciences (2012-2017). He has been on the editorial boards of international scholarly journals including Annals of the Association of American Geographers, Transactions of the Institute of British Geographers, The Canadian Geographer, Urban Geography, The Chinese Geographical Science, Eurasian Geography and Economics, and Area Development and Policy. He is the recipient of a Young Canadian Researcher Award (IDRC, Ottawa, Canada, 1992); University Teaching Fellow (HKU, 1998), Outstanding Young Researcher Award (HKU, 2002), Qiushi Chair Professorship (Zhejiang University, Hangzhou, China, 2014), Zijiang Chair Professorship (East China Normal University, Shanghai, China, 2010), and many competitive research grants from international funding agencies. He was elected Fellow of the Academy of Social Sciences (FACSS) of the UK in October 2017.

Kathryn Lincoln is Board Chair and Chief Investment Officer, Lincoln Institute of Land Policy. She has interests and experience in corporate governance for both the nonprofit arena and the for-profit sector. She has played a crucial role in the strategic direction of the Lincoln Institute, had an ongoing role in the development of education programs, and has worked extensively on the notion of impact measurement. In her role as chief investment officer, she has initiated and led conversations on asset allocation, strategic program development, and payout policies. Currently, she is a member of the Lincoln Electric Holdings board of directors, serving on the compensation/executive development committee and chairing the nominating/corporate governance committee. She serves on the board of the Lincoln Center for Applied Ethics at Arizona State University, as well as the boards of HonorHealth in Phoenix and Claremont Lincoln University in Los Angeles.

Zhi Liu is Senior Fellow and Director, China Program, Lincoln Institute of Land Policy, and Director, Peking University – Lincoln Institute Center for Urban Development and Land Policy. He is specialized in infrastructure finance, municipal finance, urban economics, and transport planning. Previously he was a lead infrastructure specialist at the World Bank, where he had many years of operational experience in the infrastructure and urban sectors. He is a member of the Expert Committee for China's 13th Five-Year National Social and Economic Development Plan. He is co-editor and a contributor of International Housing Market Experience and Implications for China published by Routledge in 2019.

Yixing Zhou is Emeritus Professor of Economic Geography and City and Regional Planning, Peking University. A leading scholar in the field of urban geography, Prof. Zhou advises the central government and numerous local governments. He was a standing director of Urban Geography Specialty Group of China Geographical Society and China Urban Science Society, member of International Advisory Board, Urban China Research Network (based at the University of New York at Albany), and full member of International Geography Union Working Group on Urbanization in Developing Countries. He served the editorial boards for several academic journals, including Economic Geography (China), City Planning (China), and Urban Affairs Review (US). He received a number of national awards for his research and planning works. In 2016, the China City Planning Society awarded Prof. Zhou a life-time achievement award, the highest honor in China's city planning profession.
